The purpose of this handbook is to provide the public with emergency response information in the face of military crises and possible catastrophes in order to promote self-help and survival.

The contents of this handbook serves as a guide the public to effectively deal with situations that might occur during wartime, including understanding the air raid warning system, knowing when and where to evacuate, how to deal with building collapses, fires, power and water outages after air raids, first aid for mass casualties caused by war disasters, how to obtain basic necessities during shortages, individual and family disaster response/war preparedness materials and rescue operations, the basics of outdoor survival, reporting hotlines during emergencies, and information on mobilization of reserve soldiers.

National defense is a demonstration of the people's overall strength, awareness, and resistance to the enemy. It is not only the responsibility of the central ministries, but also a task that the government at all levels down to district heads must bear together. We also need to pay attention to...

Before Disaster

- Check the location and contact number of the shelters near your home
- Discuss with family members in advance and agree on meeting place afterwards

During Disaster

■ Indoor:

When building collapses, take cover under a sturdy table or wall corner

In event of fire, quickly open door and escape to first floor to outdoors

If your body catches fire, stop and lie down, cover your face with your hands, and roll over to extinguish the fire

■ Outdoor: Protect your head with your belongings and keep away from buildings

After Disaster

- After the air strike, go to the location designated by the local government to meet relatives according to the contact information previously agreed

After the air raids, the entire city is dark at night, the streets are pitch black, and traffic signs are not working. What should the public do at this time?

Role of Central Government

- The Ministry of Economic Affairs supervises the TaiPower company, which is responsible for controlling the use of electricity across the country. When there is no warning of a power outage, TaiPower is required to immediately understand the cause and repair within a time limit.
